

Buenos Aires Declaration
The Nuclear Suppliers Group at Fifty

Thirty-fifth Plenary Meeting

29th-30th October, 2026

Fifty years since its establishment, the NSG's goals and objectives continue to be importantly valid and relevant. Participating Governments reiterate their commitment to control the export of nuclear and nuclear related technologies to help curb the proliferation of nuclear weapons, while facilitating the international cooperation in the peaceful uses of those technologies.

At the same time, the Nuclear Suppliers Group faces an increasingly complex geopolitical landscape and technological evolution. Against this background, it is essential that the Group remains fundamentally robust. Its core technical mandate - to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons through the implementation, at the national level, of robust and effective export controls - has proven enduring, adapting its scope while maintaining its critical relevance to the global non-proliferation architecture and contributing to international peace and security including through its role in advancing the goals of the Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons.

The Buenos Aires Declaration reaffirms that the NSG, while confronting serious challenges, will continue to operate as a forum of consensus, in accordance with its guidelines and making sure that its working mechanisms remain fit for purpose. By upholding rigorous standards of export controls while promoting international cooperation and trade, the Participating Governments commit to strengthen international efforts to ensure nuclear materials contribute only to peace and prosperity.